

New in Fall 2013

ENDING DISCRIMINATION AGAINST YOUNG PEOPLE

by Adam Fletcher

Softcover
52,000 words
978-1492183822
US$19.95
9"x6"
180 pages
August 2013
Nonfiction

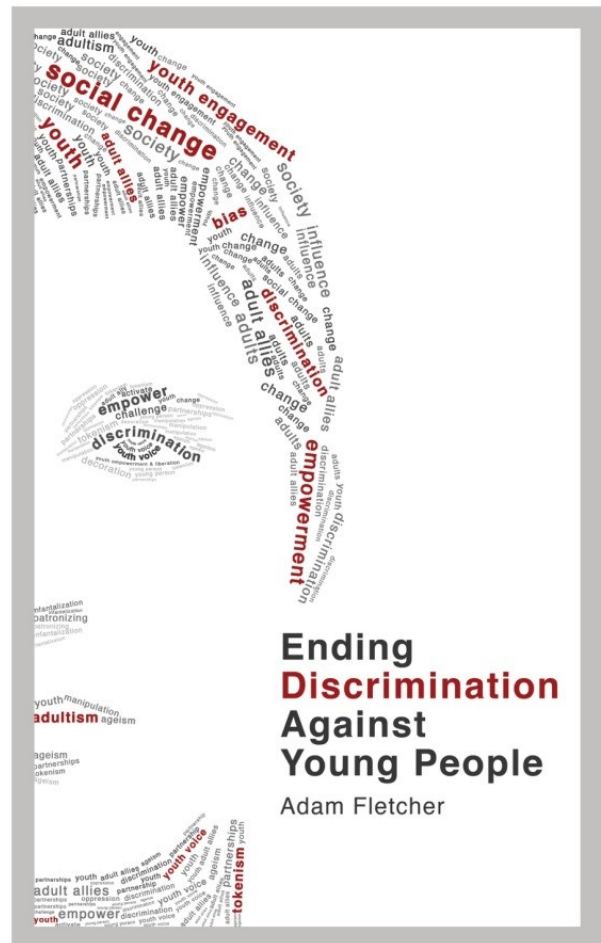

Alex Koroknay-Palicz
National Youth Rights
Association

"An expert look at the revolutionary idea that youth endure, and are harmed by, pervasive age discrimination, complete with supportive advice for youth, parents, and others."

Ending dropping out, stop runaways, fighting youth disengagement... Parents, youth workers, teachers, and others concerned with saving young people want to do better, but haven't known how—until now.

For the first time ever, one book examines how discrimination against young people affects all these issues and many, many more. It also shares how to challenge this discrimination.

People who want to understand what is afflicting children and youth today will read this book. The author, a recognized expert on these issues, includes real stories, intense details, a glossary, resources, and an index.

Award-winning youth advocate Adam Fletcher has written dozens of publications related to youth engagement. He has worked with more than 10,000 people in 100 communities across the US and Canada. Fletcher has a bachelors in writing from The Evergreen State College and did graduate work in educational leadership at the University of Washington. Learn more about him at adamfletcher.net.